PIZZA PIE LOOZA 2025 ARTISTS ANNOUNCED

According to recent community surveys, the relatively new Pizza Pie Looza has become one of, if not the most popular annual event in Nevada. Measured through an app that can calculate visits to the downtown, Pizza Pie Looza 2024 was the biggest day of the year, showing over 8,200 visits to our Main Street District. No doubt, the second-Saturday-of-May event has seen major growth in attendance during its first three years.

A few weeks ago, headliners were announced for the fourth annual Pizza Pie Looza evening concert. On the facing page, you will see the headliners' names and a QR code link to pizzapielooza.com where you can buy concert tickets. If you are uncomfortable buying tickets online, physical tickets will be available at the RE/MAX Concepts office, 1124 6th St., in Nevada.

Pizza Pie Looza began as an initiative to bring more people into Nevada to see all that our community has to offer. A small group of community leaders went from talking about this idea to bringing a committee together for planning. The planning committee is now roughly 25 people strong. This group meets monthly and sometimes twice a month as the event draws nearer.

The committee couldn't make any of it happen, however, without generous sponsors and energetic volunteers. From our major corporate sponsor, Burke Corp., to our in-kind and smaller "pieces of the pie" sponsors, every dollar is needed as we try to keep this event going for Nevada. If you would like to make a contribution to help sponsor Pizza Pie Looza, those details are also available at pizzapielooza.com.

We are always looking for more volunteers, because every "helping hand" matters on the day of the event. Our volunteers have done everything from handing out water to other volunteers to setting and tearing down the main stage, for those who want to get a workout with their volunteer time! You will also find a volunteer link at pizzapielooza.com.

Finally, the committee wants to thank all of you who attend Pizza Pie Looza. Without the community supporting the event, it wouldn't be worth doing. Here's to what we hope is another successful year! See you May 10!

Leslie Dooley with her son, Ayden

Nevada family grateful for life-saving outcome

Imagine having your own child go into cardiac arrest before your very eyes, and knowing you must act to save them.

Leslie Dooley of Nevada doesn't have to imagine. She lived it, and at the Jan. 13, 2025, Nevada City Council meeting, Leslie was presented with a Citizen Hero Award for her actions on Dec. 4, 2024, when, her 22-year-old son, Ayden, stopped breathing.

Nearly a month-and-a-half later, Leslie still got emotional thinking back on that day, a day her son says he can't remember. "I have a hard time remembering that time in general," Ayden said, noting his memories now are mostly from November and earlier.

Leslie's OK with her son having no memory of the event, but it's one she will likely never forget. Working from home as a statistician for the federal Health Resources Services Agency, Leslie was in her office at the front of the house that Wednesday (Dec. 4, 2024) when Ayden, who lives in the basement of his parents' home, stopped in to talk with her.

He pulled out his laptop, and the two were visiting about his upcoming finals and grades at Iowa State University, where Ayden is studying mechanical engineering. Leslie turned back to her own computer to look at a few emails, and heard her son make some "really strange" breathing sounds.

"I thought he was being goofy, and I turned back around." Ayden, who'd been sitting on a sofa in the room, had an odd look about him. "It was very clear that something was not right. He had a strange yellow color and he was hunched forward with his hands clutched and tense. When I spoke to him, he didn't respond."

Her first thought was that he was having a seizure, but as a lactation consultant, Leslie is trained annually in CPR, and as she called in to 911 and started checking Ayden's pupils and pulse, she couldn't find a pulse.

"It became apparent that he needed CPR," she said, and with that burst of adrenaline we so often hear about in crises, Leslie lifted her son off the couch and onto the floor and began chest compressions. "In my mind, I kept saying, 'I have to keep his blood moving,' and I was somehow able to separate myself just a little bit from thinking about this being my baby."

Very soon, Nevada police officers arrived, followed by other first responders. "They knew they were prepared for a cardiac event and were able to come right in with everything they needed," she said.

Story Medical Ambulance then took Ayden to the local hospital, where he was cared for until MercyOne Air Med landed to take him to Des Moines. It was the beginning of what would be a long month for the Dooley family. Not only did both Leslie and her husband James get Covid at points of the month, but Ayden, who had been kept sedated for a few days before having an internal defibrillator device implanted for his heart, was released from Mercy only to be rushed to the ER twice at Mary Greeley Medical Center in Ames in the coming days. He was then hospitalized at MGMC with pneumonia and fluid around his lungs, before finally coming back home a day after Christmas.

Leslie and James are grateful for the support they had from both family members and Ayden's close high school friends and their parents. Ayden too is thankful. "I really appreciate my friends. They missed work just to see me. That really means a lot."

The Dooleys are now focused on trying to figure out what caused Ayden to have a cardiac episode at such a young age. They are working with doctors at Iowa Heart on things like genetic testing to try to understand if Ayden might still be at risk.

"It's scary just knowing it could happen again," Ayden said. "That's always in the back of my mind." He's grateful to have the internal defibrillator, even though it makes lying on his back uncomfortable.

Leslie tries not to think about how differently the day of Dec. 4 could have gone. She is thankful that she and her son are close and that he stopped in her office that day to talk before going downstairs, where she wouldn't have known he was suffering. She also thinks about how grateful she is to have the CPR training she's had. She strongly advocates for other people, especially parents, to receive the life-saving training.

At the Jan. 13 City Council meeting, the Nevada Public Safety Department and Story Medical were given a Clinical Save Award by Zoll, the company that provides training for Nevada Public Safety officers and firefighters. It was noted by Fire Chief Ray Reynolds that the training received was vital in how the events of Dec. 4 played out.

Leslie and James are grateful for all the responders in Nevada and at Mercy who were involved in saving Ayden's life. "I'm beyond thankful and impressed," Leslie said. "They were all incredible."

Having been raised in Chicago and lived in cities, Leslie is also very thankful to now live in a community like Nevada. "At THE scariest time in my life, everyone responded and acted in such a way that made it less scary, and made it the absolute best. Seeing the genuine concern and care everyone had ... I really felt that sense of community, and I think it's rare. I don't know that I have the right words to say what everyone means to me."

James agrees. "Saying thank-you isn't enough," he added.

The family plans to celebrate the great outcome by treating themselves to a bucket-list item this coming summer. The family, including Ayden's sister, Maddie, will travel to Hawaii...Aloha!

The Dooley family (center dad James, Ayden, mom Leslie, daughter Maddie) posed for a photo at the January 13 Nevada City Council meeting with many of the responders who were there for them on December 4, 2024, when Ayden went into cardiac arrest. Everyone was thankful for a life-saving outcome.

Enjoy the outdoors with pets responsibly

Spring weather is just around the corner and that means more humans and our four-legged friends will be out enjoying the sidewalks and trails.

The Nevada Parks and Recreation Department reminds pet owners of a few simple courtesies when utilizing the City's sidewalks and trails, and when making visits to our City parks and City cemetery with your pets.

Please be sure to pick up after your pets with a pet waste bag. We have pet waste bag stations placed at most entrances to the City's trail system. If you do not bring a bag with you, please take one of ours.

Pets must be restrained at all times. Failure to restrain your pet may result in a citation as outlined in the City of Nevada's Municipal Code of Ordinances. This is a safety issue for all park users, as well as for each pet.

Pets are not to be let out on any of our sports playing fields. The Parks and Rec staff works very hard to provide quality athletic fields for our community sporting events. Kids, coaches, and spectators involved in these activities deserve a clean and sanitary venue for their activities.

Finally, dogs are allowed in the cemetery if they remain on a leash and stay on the roadways. At no time shall anyone allow their dog to run at-large in the cemetery. We have pet waste bag stations at the cemetery for you to use, if needed.

Everyone likes to have positive outdoor experiences and enjoy clean environments. Please be a responsible pet owner so everyone can enjoy Nevada's outdoor public spaces.

If you have questions or concerns regarding your pet and City ordinances, reach out to Animal Control Officer Nancy Pritchard, at 515-382-4593, or if it concerns our parks and trails, reach out to Nevada Parks and Recreation, 515-382-4352.

MANUFACTURING MINUTE WITH PARAGON

Jake Swegle

Glenda Swegle

David Swegle

Ownership: Paragon is owned by David and Glenda Swegle and employs their two children, Jake Swegle and Rebecca Nastuzzo. Glenda has begun scaling back her involvement and turning more work over to Rebecca, who will work with OSHA, reportable injuries, payroll, and various other human resources matters, and with her degree in culinary science, Rebecca also oversees the syrup room. Jake works in sales and marketing for the business and is gradually taking over meetings for his father.

History of the business: It started in 1979 as Goodlaxson Manufacturing Industries in Colfax, Iowa. In 1992, the business was acquired by Margaret and Cliff Wilson, who employed and then gradually sold the business to Margaret's son, David Swegle, who has also worked as an engineer for the business. The Wilsons moved the business to Union, Iowa, and needing a larger space, in 2000, owners Glenda and David brought the business to Nevada, Iowa.

Goals of the business: Since David's designing of the 1911-4 ounce popcorn machine in 1995, which started a mini-revolution of sorts in developing a home market for commercial quality popcorn machines, the business continues to develop new product lines.

Jake said when it comes to popcorn machines, Paragon has engaged in making machines for all tiers of needs, from the smaller home models to the large tier models for schools and other bigger concession areas. Now, they're entering the top tier with models to serve large movie theaters, amusement parks, and larger stadiums.

The company has also expanded product lines by making more types of things, including sno-cone and cotton candy-making equipment to portable sinks, which are popular for food trucks and outdoor events.

What they like best about Nevada: Glenda was happy to see Nevada become a Main Street community. "We followed what Main Street did in Conrad and when Main Street Nevada came around that got me excited because a community's main street is important."

THE WALL THAT HEALS

Traveling Memorial coming to Nevada this year!

Big things are coming to Nevada this summer! One of them is 375 feet long and 7.5 feet tall. The Wall That Heals is a 3/4-scale replica of the famous memorial wall in Washington, D.C. It has been displayed in nearly 800 communities throughout the nation and Nevada is honored to be on the 2025 tour!

The Wall That Heals will be in Nevada Aug. 7-10. This traveling exhibit honors more than 3 million Americans who served in the U.S. Armed Forces in the Vietnam War, and it bears the names of the 58,281 men and women who made the ultimate sacrifice in Vietnam. Visitors can see The Wall up close, do a name rubbing, visit the mobile Education Center, and participate in tours and programming. This is a free event.

The committee, comprised of local military veterans and community leaders, is planning some ceremonies and programs during the four-day event. These may include Taps being played at sundown to honor service members who paid the ultimate price.

More information will be available as the event draws closer. Make sure to follow the Saluting Service page on Facebook as well as the Main Street Nevada, IA Facebook page.

To make this event successful, MANY volunteers are needed. If you are interested in helping out with this event, scan the QR code to sign-up. Groups are encouraged. This would be a great thing for employers to do for a community service day!

Additionally, if you have a Vietnam Veteran you'd like to honor during this event, please let us know. The committee is working on ways to recognize our local heroes. Send an email to vincentheavy74@gmail.com.

Unserved or underserved?

NOFA8 PROJECT BRINGING HIGH-SPEED INTERNET AND FIBER-BASED PHONE SERVICES TO RURAL AREAS

Central Iowa Broadband (CIB), an affiliate of Colo Telephone Company, has completed Phase I and is about to start Phase II of bringing high-speed internet and fiber-based phone services to rural Story County residents, many with rural Nevada addresses. This is all happening as part of the NOFA8 project.

According to CIB's Customer Experience Specialist Avery King, the locations for where to install fiber have been based on "reported underserved and/or unserved locations" as established by the Federal Communications Commission.

Phase I of NOFA8, which concluded several weeks ago, included 27 locations, some of which were along Stage Coach Road in Ames, some along 19th Street south of Nevada, some along Highway 30 headed east of Nevada, and a few properties on 670th and 663rd Avenues.

"We received permission from 21 of those property owners to bury our fiber," King explained. "We do get people who say 'no' during our projects, and the downside (of saying no) is that should they change their mind in the future, there are significant construction costs they'll become responsible for."

CIB estimates it will spend $3.2 million on this project. "We are also receiving funds made available through the State of Iowa, DOM DoIT Division," King said.

Colo Telephone Company/CIB took on the project because the company wants to make a difference for the future with fiber, which in the communications world is considered "future proof" and offers the flexibility to deliver additional services in years to come.

"We believe it is important to provide

The grey route is where Colo Telephone/Central Iowa Broadband currently serves. The colored route, covering northwest rural Nevada, is the NOFA8 area. This map does not include the additional addresses they hope to pick up along the way if those are within a reasonable distance.

service to as many people as possible," King said. "Rural customers are often left underserved or unserved, and this project will allow us to serve those who have been waiting a long time for a reliable service."

King said Central Iowa Broadband is excited to reach more rural areas and provide reliable high-speed internet and phone services through NOFA8. "Our high-speed internet is ideal for use with on-demand streaming services, such as Netflix and Amazon Prime, as well as live TV streaming services, such as Hulu Live, YouTube TV and DirectTV Stream. Our speeds offer symmetrical uploads and downloads, starting at 250 mbps up to 1G."

As residents in areas where fiber is readily accessible know, fiber can transport virtually unlimited bandwidth and accommodate the increasing demand for high-speed internet connections from multiple users and devices. Fiber-optic cables are less susceptible to glitches and can withstand shocks, vibrations and interferences from inclement weather, unlike towers and satellites.

Phase II of the CIB project to bring reliable fiber services to rural residents is set to begin this spring and will consist of more than 100 locations, all of which are rural Nevada addresses. King added that CIB will pick up additional customers/areas as the project allows.

If you would like more information on the areas that are served, or may potentially be served, by Colo Telephone/CIB, go to NOFA 8 | Colo Telephone Company.

If you have questions about whether you have a rural Nevada address that might be served in this project, and even if you're not within the service area but would like to know more about rural fiber, call Avery King at 641-377-2202 or email: avery@colotel.org and she'll be glad to talk with you.

Mrs. Kelley's Legacy

As Tori Kelley prepares to retire from Central Elementary, we celebrate her remarkable career and the lasting legacy she leaves behind. Her innovative approach to physical education has inspired countless young lives, instilling a love for movement, teamwork, and personal growth.

One of Mrs. Kelley's signature activities revolves around the Olympics. She brings this global event to life for students with opening and award ceremonies, creative versions of Olympic events, and lessons on peace and unity. We go over the top when it comes to the Olympic ceremonies.

Her creativity is also evident through themed days like Talk Like a Pirate Day and Teddy Bear Day, where students perform physical challenges alongside their stuffed companions. One of the most highly anticipated events is the Haunted House at Halloween. "They start asking about it in August," she shared.

Another beloved tradition is Mario Kart, where students race around the gym on scooters collecting objects that give them super powers or slowing their classmates down. It is highly engaging for the students as this is based off a popular video game but students are using physical activity instead. Second-grader Mason Egeland exclaimed, "I love the races and getting the prizes!" Third-grader Emma Luig added, "Mrs. Kelley always makes sure we have fun and stay safe."

Field Day stands as one of her enduring legacies, where students spend the entire day engaging in outdoor activities, cheering each other on, and embracing the joy of movement. "The kids are exhausted but happy," she noted.

Kelley's teaching emphasizes not only fun but also creativity and skill development. She encourages students to adapt games at home with household items. "If you don't have a hockey stick, use a broom. If you don't have a puck, try using a ball," she suggests. There are always things students can find around the house to adapt games and skills they are working on in class. She always wraps up PE classes by fostering sportsmanship through student shout-outs to their peers.

A strong advocate for outdoor play, Mrs. Kelley reminds students to get fresh air. "Your lungs need you to breathe fresh air. Inside has everybody's germs that are circulating, so get outside, run so you have to breathe hard, and clean your lungs," she advises students. "Walk your dog, play football, go for a walk, and get off the video games."

Thank you, Mrs. Tori Kelley, for your boundless creativity, dedication, and profound impact on generations of students. Your legacy will always be cherished in the Nevada Community School District.

Eighth Graders Work on Executive Functions Through Mindfulness Practice

Eighth graders have been working to grow their executive function skills. Executive function refers to skills that you use to manage everyday tasks like making plans, solving problems and adapting to new situations. Recently, they have been working on focus and sustained attention.

Kate Wieczorek, eighth-grade math teacher, invited Meg Frideres, who serves as a mindfulness coach for the Nevada Community School District, to visit her classes. Frideres (pictured) shared mindfulness practices that can help in growing the ability to focus and sustain attention. These practices can also help manage stress which many students say they deal with often.

Family Health Matters

Raising healthy children isn't just about doctor visits—it's about building a strong foundation for lifelong wellness

With Spring Break on the horizon, the days of outdoor play are clearly in our sights. As the weather warms and the hours of daylight grow longer, it's a good bet your children will be buzzing about the opportunities to get out of the house and run around a little bit.

And that is a wonderful thing.

Raising healthy children isn't just about doctor visits—it's about building a strong foundation for lifelong wellness. Encouraging kids to develop healthy habits early on can lead to better physical and mental health well into adulthood. From the regular exercise offered during activities like outdoor play to balanced nutrition and quality sleep, small, daily choices add up to long-term benefits.

According to Dr. Audra Poterucha, a family medicine provider at Story Medical Clinic—Nevada, the key to success is making health a fun and natural part of daily life.

Fueling Young Bodies with Nutrition

One of the most important aspects of childhood health is balanced nutrition. Teaching kids to enjoy a variety of foods, rather than restricting them, sets the stage for a lifelong healthy relationship with food.

"It's all about balance," says Dr. Poterucha. "Encourage kids to try different fruits, vegetables, and whole grains. If they see parents enjoying healthy meals, they're more likely to do the same."

Try involving children in meal planning and preparation. Let them pick out a new fruit at the store, stir ingredients in the kitchen, or help set the table. When kids feel involved, they are more likely to enjoy the meal and make healthier choices.

Keeping Kids Active

Physical activity is another essential piece of the puzzle. The CDC recommends at least 60 minutes of physical activity per day for children. That doesn't mean forcing them to do structured workouts—running, playing outside, riding bikes, or even dancing in the living room all count!

"The key is to find activities they enjoy," says Dr. Poterucha. "If they love soccer, swimming, or just playing tag in the yard, encourage that movement daily. The goal is to make activity a regular part of their routine."

Limiting screen time is another way to encourage active play. Try setting device-free times during the day and offering alternative activities like board games, puzzles, or outdoor adventures.

Prioritizing Sleep and Mental Well-Being

Healthy habits extend beyond diet and exercise—quality sleep and mental well-being are just as important. Kids need 9-12 hours of sleep per night, depending on their age. A consistent bedtime routine with no screens before bed can help establish healthy sleep patterns.

Parents should also create a safe space for kids to express emotions and manage stress. Encouraging open conversations about feelings, practicing mindfulness, and ensuring children have a good support system can help their emotional well-being.

"Helping kids develop strong mental and emotional health is just as important as physical health," says Dr. Poterucha. "Building resilience, encouraging open communication, and modeling healthy stress management can make a huge difference in their overall well-being."

Building a Foundation for Lifelong Health

Small daily choices—like choosing water over soda, taking a walk as a family, or ensuring bedtime routines are consistent—can add up to a lifetime of healthy habits. Leading by example is one of the most effective ways parents can help their children establish wellness routines that will benefit them for years to come.

At Story Medical, we are committed to supporting families in building healthier lives. If you have questions about your child's health or need guidance, our providers are here to help.

Our primary care clinics are proud to serve children. To schedule an appointment with one of our providers, please call 515-382-5413 in Nevada or 515-387-8815 in Maxwell. Learn more about all our providers at storymedical.org.

STORY MEDICAL NOW OFFERING SHIIP COUNSELING IN NEVADA

In an effort aimed at providing vital services to older adults in our community, Story Medical is now offering Senior Health Insurance Information Program (SHIIP) counseling—a free, confidential service designed to help Medicare beneficiaries and their families navigate their healthcare coverage options.

Medicare can be complex, but SHIIP counselors provide unbiased guidance on topics such as Medicare benefits, supplemental insurance, Medicare Advantage plans, and prescription drug coverage. Whether you're enrolling for the first time, reviewing your current plan, or have questions about claims and billing, our trained SHIIP counselors are here to assist.

"Our goal is to help community members make informed healthcare decisions," says Joni Johnston, Director of Financial Services at Story Medical. "SHIIP ensures that Medicare beneficiaries have access to clear, accurate information so they can choose the best coverage for their needs."

For more information or to schedule an appointment with a SHIIP counselor at Story Medical, call 515-382-2111. Let us help you navigate Medicare with confidence!
